

Everything You Can Do in Miami This Holiday Season

Though we don't have the onslaught of aggressively bright lights off the Palmetto Expressway that typically signals the holiday season in South Florida, Christmas is far from dead. Ok, so there's no Santa's. Or boat parade. Or ice skating rinks that melt by noon. But we've still got Mi Burrito Sabanero on Power 96 and, as long we've got that, Christmas will never die. In addition to Dade County's signature Christmas song, we've also got some other traditions you can still enjoy, like The Nutcracker performed outdoors, a Christmas-themed bar, and Santa's villages aplenty. So if you're still feeling the holiday spirit in South Florida, here's the best places to get out and enjoy it.

Watch a drive-in movie under holiday lights

Friday, December 11

Doral Central Park

In what can only be described as the ultimate 2020 Christmas event, Doral Central Park continues its drive-in movie series, screening The Santa Clause sometime after 6 pm. In addition to the Tim Allen classic, you'll also be treated to a drive-through light display on the way to your parking space, transporting you to the Christmas season from the subtropical environs of Doral.

Cost: $5 per vehicle

Learn how to build your own snow globe

Saturday, December 12

Boca Center

Ever wondered how you could create your own wintry paperweight with a scene of snow falling on downtown Hialeah that makes your friends say, "Bro, where'd you get that?" Well, while you'll have to create your own Hialeah street scene, the elves from artNEST will show you how to do the rest during a Snow Globe workshop from 11 am - 2 pm.

Cost: $10, all proceeds benefit the Giving Network

FAIRCHILD TROPICAL BOTANIC GARDEN

Construct your own Christmas wreath

Saturday, December 12 - Sunday, December 13

Fairchild Tropical Garden

Fairchild Gardens becomes a sort of Austria-with-Banyan-trees this December, bringing a full-fledged holiday market to its lush tropical landscape. The best time to visit will be the weekend of the 12-13, where you'll partake in a wreath building experience to create a festive door decoration to last the rest of the season.

Cost: $90 per person, $75 for members
