

Actually Fun Things To Do in Miami This Weekend

Enjoy comedy in a taco shop, doo-wop in a parking lot, and jazz in a field of orchids.

By Matt Moltzer Updated on 3/11/2021 at 4:20 PM

FAIRCHILD TROPICAL BOTANIC GARDEN

This was a rough week for Facebook memories. At some point you undoubtedly were reminded that it was about a year ago you went to your last live show/movie in the theater/Hialeah cockfight. But don't despair too much, because this weekend is teeming with the most live performances we've seen in a long time—with everything from stand-up comedy in a taco shop, to doo-wop in a parking lot, to jazz in a field of orchids. So take a deep breath, pack your mask, and get ready to head back out, South Florida. This weekend has all that plus beer-and-bacon ice cream waiting for you.

Kick off the Orchid Festival with live jazz

Friday, March

Fairchild Garden

Like so many things, Fairchild's annual orchid festival is making up for a lost 2020 and extending the celebration to 10 days this year, with plant demos, lectures, and live music running through March 21. Friday night, the festivities begin with a live set from the Brian Tate Quartet at 7:30 pm.

Cost: Members $45, non-members $65